

The Adventures of Andrew Price Creators

Sandrine Love

Sandrine Love, formerly Sandrine Hahn, MA, serves as the executive and creative director of Nourishing Our Children, a non-profit, educational initiative of the Weston A. Price Foundation established to support the health of our children. She previously worked as a family therapist, art therapist, teacher, and as an educational therapist in private practice before she established Nourishing Our Children in 2005. Convinced that the children she worked with were well-fed but malnourished, Sandrine closed her private practice to devote herself to the cause of educating and inspiring parents to return to the whole, natural foods that have produced generation after generation of healthy children. She founded the San Francisco Chapter of the Weston A. Price Foundation in 2004 and served as the volunteer chapter leader for more than a year. She now serves as the Portland, Oregon co-chapter leader. Sandrine has taught Nourishing Traditions and Moroccan cooking classes, and also leads Nourishing Ourselves, an educational initiative focused on adults. She received an activist award from the Weston A. Price Foundation in 2006 for her leadership role. Sandrine has a visual communication business whereby she offers photography services on location and in the studio, as well as visual design for print, web and presentations.

Mohammad Naser

Mohammad Naser works as a 3D modeler and graphic designer. He has a Bachelor of Fine Arts in Design and Applied Arts / Graphic Design from Jami'at Al-Yarmouk University in Jordan and a Masters Degree in 3D Modeling from the Academy of Art University in San Francisco. He illustrated The Adventures of Andrew Price children's book, and co-created the fictitious character that serves as the narrator.